A classic review of a book published in the Sunday magazine section of The Hindu made us reflect on the utter necessity of growing trees to save humanity from extinction. The entertaining article was on an appealing book titled The Hidden Life of Trees by Peter Wohlleben. The critic begins his writing by posing a question, “It is safe to say that trees are universally appreciated—But this has not prevented epidemics of deforestation. How do we protect what we all love, and why do we seem unable to?”. In fact, Nature worship was part of our ancient civilization and trees have always been intrinsically associated with places of worship in India; and the people worshipped them as “Sthala Virutcham”. The word “Virutcham” symbolizes growth, prosperity and plenty. This attitude testifies to the care bestowed on afforestation and exemplifies the importance attached to it by our ancestors.

During the recently held Village Placement Programme (VPP), the second year postgraduate students of our university planted a number of tree saplings and created awareness among the villagers on the significance of growing and protecting trees. The current concern expressed by the scientists on global warming, climate changes and depletion of ozone and increase in the emission of carbon dioxide and the need for growing more and more trees to protect the biosphere was explained in simpler terms to the rural folk. A week after planting the saplings, the students fixed tree-guards. They have resolved to continue this good work. Indeed, the Village Placement Programme afforded an opportunity to the students to get first-hand experience of real rural life and also to involve themselves in constructive social work. It has enabled students to study the socio-economic conditions of people belonging to different communities. Enthused by their sincere endeavours the University has adopted the seven villages where VPP was held and the plan is on the anvil to provide good sanitary, library and computer facilities to the schools situated in these places. It was really a momentous occasion for the students to realize their social responsibilities as true citizens.

A recent news item refers to a study on Indian plant species in the Nilgiris made by the renowned British botanist Henry Noltie. He has said that there needed to be better awareness among the forest departments in India about the importance of native species of plants. He has also pointed to the destructive role played by invasive foreign species such as eucalyptus. In this context, our efforts to establish a herbal Botanical Garden within the University Campus to grow rare indigenous species of plants with tremendous medicinal potential assumes singular significance as it will raise awareness among the public on the importance of native species of plants. The current issue of Azhagu contains a number of informative items to regale the readers.

In his Independence Day address, he recalled the great sacrifices made by the freedom fighters and highlighted the significance of taking our Nation to greater heights in all fields by our dedicated hard work. Referring to the impressive growth of our country in all fields, he said that the literacy rate which was 12% at the time of Independence has increased to 75% in 2016. It is intrinsically linked to the economic development of a nation. Education is one of the most potential weapons to fight against socio economic maladies like poverty and inequality.

In the enrolment of students in higher education India stands above USA and India has the second largest system of higher education. Huge human resources available in Tamilnadu is a point to be noted and the potential to be channelized and utilized for further progress of the State. Teachers Day Celebrations

The Teachers Day was celebrated on 6.9.2016 at Alagappa University, Karaikudi. Prof. S. Subbiah, Vice-Chancellor, Alagappa University, presiding over the function, said that a disciple of Saint Kabirdas once asked his Guru if he would worship first god or his teacher. Kabirdas answered "Teacher" and added "because he is the one who taught me the concept of God". He also mentioned how the Greek King Philip proudly rejoiced over his son's birth during the time of his great teacher Aristotle. The distinguished speaker recalled that Dr. S. Radhakrishnan was the only Indian President who was allowed to travel in an aeroplane meant exclusively for the American President. He was given this honour not because Dr. S. Radhakrishnan was a President but because of his noble profession as an exemplary teacher and erudite philosopher. Through these anecdotes, the Vice-Chancellor highlighted the dignified status the teacher occupied in all societies. He remarked that the chief trait of a good teacher is to win the hearts of students by dedicating himself to the uplift of students. He appealed to the teachers to impart life skills, besides teaching the regular subjects. He stated that a teacher respected by all the students is the best teacher. He asked the teachers to think of uplifting their students all the time and that should be their prime duty.

Kalaimamani Dr. K. GnanaSambandan, Distinguished Professor, Thiagarajar College, Madurai, delivered the Special Address. He lauded Dr. S.Radhakrishnan as a scholar par excellence who fully imbibed and disseminated Indian culture to the world. He recalled that the teachers were glorified by the society as they were considered almost equal to God. Good teachers are capable of showing men their identities and bring out the hidden talents in them. He exhorted the teachers to update their knowledge with new ideas regularly so as to inculcate innovative thinking in their wards. He emphasized that moulding students as good citizens with high moral values and useful knowledge should be the sole duty of teachers.

DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH AND FOREIGN LANGUAGES

Special Lecture Programme

The Department of English and Foreign Languages organized a special discourse on 24th July 2016 with Prof Julius Irudhayasamy from Thofar University, Oman, as the resource person. Dr. P. Madhan, Associate Professor of English, delivered the welcome address. The guest speaker structured his discourse in three parts and in the first part he dwelt at length on the significance of English language skills for employment not just at national level but at global level as well. Over and above, he explained that if students pursuing other subjects are well-versed and strong in English that would stand them in good stead to have jobs. The second part of the lecture was devoted to offer an account of traditional methods of teaching English. It shed light on how in the past, the English teaching fraternity had to make use of talk and chalk method only. In course of his discourse, he observed that the traditional methods of teaching English also proved to be effective in strengthening the English knowledge and fluency of the learners. But the only drawback of traditional method is the too much use of mother tongue and translation which Prof. Julius Irudhayasamy said would hamper the language learning process. Then, when he moved on to the third part of his discourse, he highlighted the advantages of modern techniques of teaching languages. The distinguished speaker exhorted the students to think in English to attain fluency and make the most of language teaching software and laboratories, which he said would have a great impact on their language acquisition process. At the end of his lecture, he stated that English in today's world has turned out to be so significant that it is considered to be synonymous with prosperity, success and recognition. Finally, Dr. Natarajan, Assistant Professor of English, proposed a formal vote of thanks.

Workshop on Research Methodology

Under the patronage of the Higher Education Department of the Government of Tamil Nadu, the Centre for Academic and Technical Writing, Alagappa University, Karaikudi, organized a Two-day Workshop on Research Methodology for the Ph.D scholars of Faculty of Arts, Alagappa University, Karaikudi, Tamil Nadu and the Ph.D scholars of Putra University, Malaysia.

Presiding over the inaugural function on 12.08.2016, Prof. S.Subbiah, Vice-Chancellor, Alagappa University, said the quest for new knowledge is concerned with studious inquiry and a passion for delving deep into the subject selected for investigation. "Establishing systematic and valid knowledge about the social world should be the objective of research" he added. He stressed the importance of a thorough and serious review of earlier researches before finalizing the topic for current research, so as to avoid repetition of research. He made a reference to MoUs entered into by Alagappa University with Universities abroad. Participation of Putra University Research Scholars in the workshop, he added, will not only heighten their research skills but also provide them with an opportunity to learn about the culture of India. The technological innovations and the consequent use of multimedia in teaching and research have revolutionized the frontiers of research; and he appealed to the researchers to obtain the aforesaid skills for bringing in new knowledge to the outside world.

Prof.V. Balachandran, Registrar i/c in his felicitation address, said how western countries spent enormous amount of money for the documentation of research works. He highlighted the importance of research for a nation's growth and pointed out the significance given by the Corporate Sectors throughout the world for research and development activities for their growth.

Dr.K. Manimekalai, Former Vice-Chancellor, Mother Teresa Women's University, Kodaikanal, and Dean, Faculty of Arts, Alagappa University, said that there is no need for researchers to neglect the classical issues but the same problems could be seen from new perspectives. At the same time she exhorted the researchers not to belittle or discard but to give importance to the emerging trends and issues and contemporaneous problems and warned that it would not be an easy task.

Speaking on the occasion, Prof.K.Karunakaran, Former Vice-Chancellor of Tamil University, Thanjavur, said that in the changing scenario the researchers should bear in mind that they work for world community. In this context, he said that the collaboration and sharing of knowledge with other universities would be more profitable and relevant. He stressed the need to strengthen research in basic sciences in India today. He advised the scholars to undertake interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary research for revitalization of research process.

Dr.Vijayaletchumy Subramanian of Putra University, Malaysia, in her felicitation address, said the objective of this programme is not only the sharpening of research skills of scholars but also providing a forum for cultural exchange. She added that this program would provide synergy to the scholars of both the universities.

Earlier Dr.PMadhan, Head i/c, Department of English and Foreign Languages, welcomed the gathering. The first lecture given by Dr. A. Narayanamoorthy, Member of the Syndicate, focused on the aptitude for research. He was very lucid in his instructions about formulating a thesis statement. He emphasized that having an in-depth knowledge of the existing literature in one's field of study will serve as the base for futuristic research and it will serve as a road map for the project. He also explained the need to use simple words that will help express ideas forcefully while writing the thesis and also the importance of evaluation of the sources in terms of authority, reliability and currency, with a view to referring to the top journals, instead of questionable secondary sources.

Dr. Karunakaran explained the need for research in today's research scenario; and he expostulated the meaning of research and the way in which the research has to be approached by the researcher. He felt that the standard of research has come down woefully nowadays and one has to select the topics which would benefit the society at large. He also gave an idea about the linguistic culture of various languages and also the stylistic notations that can be used in the language. This lecture clearly showed where we lack and what we lack in terms of research in the true sense of the word.

Dr. N. Kalaithasan's (Formerly Visiting Professor, Department of English and Foreign Languages) whole talk centered around the focus on the primary sources and the necessity of applying three "I"s : having rich Insights leading to drawing Inferences to arrive at different ways of Interpreting the text with stress on holistic approach. Not only words have meanings, but also stylistic devices employed by the writer do have meanings. To mention a few, spacing or setting off a passage from the preceding text, using all capitals, applying small letters in the place of capitals do help the researchers interpret the text. By way of elaborations and illustrations, the speaker began cataloguing a step by step approach to the study of a work of art. The exploitation of action verbs and non-action verbs and pejorative adjectives in a writer's work go a long way in interpreting and enriching the meaning of a text. Even grammatical deviation, semantic deviation and a graphological deviations cannot be ignored while explicating a text. On no account should the researcher be tempted to walk into the trap of plagiarism. In this connection, the speaker quoted the words of Emerson to stress that a researcher should be “a man thinking and not a mere thinker”. He rounded off his talk with the words of Emerson: “We must walk with our own legs, work with our own hands and think our own minds”.

Dr. S. Ganesan, Associate Professor of English, H..H. the Rajah's College, Pudukkottai, explained the “cutting edge affairs” in research. He stressed the need for knowing the latest research trends for turning out a good piece of research work. A holistic approach will prove to be very effective in taking up researches in Humanities. He dwelt in detail on the technicalities of writing a good thesis following the latest MLA style. He asked the scholars to think innovatively and come out with novel ideas and findings in their research endeavors. He warned the researchers against plagiarism and its serious consequences.

Educate, Advocate and Lead

Two – Day Legal Awareness Programme on Justice for Women

The inaugural function of a Two-Day Legal Awareness Programme titled “Justice for Women – Educate, Advocate and Lead” was held at Alagappa

University on 30.9.2016. The programme was organized by the Department of Women's Studies and Centre for Women's Studies in collaboration with the National Commission for Women, New Delhi. The aim of the programme was to create legal awareness among the Teacher Educators, particularly among women students.

Prof. K. Manimekalai, Dean, Faculty of Arts, and Head, Women's Studies, Alagappa University, welcomed the gathering and highlighted the importance of conducting the legal awareness programme, particularly to the Teacher Educators for educating the women students on their basic legal rights.

Prof.S. Subbiah, Vice-Chancellor, Alagappa University, in his presidential address, referred to the plight of Indian Women. Gender inequalities, certain traditional practices and women's ignorance of their fundamental civil and Constitutional Rights, act as deterrents and stumbling blocks in empowering women. According to the latest data released by the National Crime Records Bureau (NCRB), a total of 3,37,922 cases of crime against women were reported in India during the year 2014. Referring to the increase of crime rates, he said that 2.24 million crimes against women were reported over the past decade. Every hour 26 crimes against women are reported; and one complaint registered in every 2 minutes reveals the cruelty done to women. Throughout the world women are facing problems due to lack of legal awareness and same is the case with India where half of the population are women. Hence, creating legal awareness becomes imperative and women teacher educators should be imparted the basic legal knowledge, so that they may be made to impart the same to their students. He congratulated the organizers and the National Commission for Women, New Delhi, for selecting this most appropriate topic for discussion, enlightenment and dissemination.

Dr. P. Vanangamudi, Vice-Chancellor, The Tamil Nadu Dr. Ambedkar Law University, Chennai, in his inaugural address, lauded the Constitution of India which guarantees social, economic and political justice to all citizens. The speciality of the Indian Constitution is its vibrancy even after 66 years. Attributing women's sufferings mainly to the patriarchal attitude of the Indian society, he said that the Family Law needed enormous changes that could bring in real justice to women. Further, he added that the Indian Succession Act also needed changes to safeguard women in the inheritance of property. The increase in enrollment of women in educational institutions augurs well for the nation's development paving the way for women's progress. He noted that women have occupied supreme positions such as Presidents, Prime Minister, Chief Ministers, Governors, Ministers after India's independence. It is due to the equal status offered to men and women in our Constitutional set-up. Yet that there is an urgent need to impart awareness among women of their basic rights enshrined in our legal system.

Prof. V. Balachandran, Registrar i/c., Alagappa University, in his felicitation address, said that only in India, there are plethora of laws enacted to regulate and safeguard the citizens of India. "All are equal before law and nobody is above law". As ignorance of law is not an excuse, everyone is expected to know the laws of the land. India being one of the most democratic countries in the world, everyone is given equal status and equal opportunities to get education and employment in all spheres of life. When women encounter atrocities, they should remember that there are several laws pertaining to their protection from the onslaught. He appealed to the Teacher Educators to imbibe the spirit of the law and impart the same to their wards.

Thiru. T.V. Hemananda Kumar, Principal Sub-Judge, Tirunelveli, delivered the valedictory address. He highlighted the dire need for creating legal awareness among women and also listed out various legislative measures initiated by the Government and their impact on society. He said that every Indian citizen is expected to know the legal rights, duties and provisions of the Constitution of India. He pointed out some shocking facts and he said that India is considered not a very safe country in the world as crimes against women and children are on increase day by day; every day 26 rape cases are registered and unreported cases are double in number; human trafficking is also high. People are ignorant of registering a case in police station and they do not know how to approach cases in the law court.

Dr. S. Poul Punitha, Asst. Professor, Centre for Women's Studies, proposed a vote of thanks and distributed certificates to the participants. Nearly 150 Teacher Educators and students from the Department of Women's Studies and Faculty Members attended the programme.

DEPARTMENT OF SOCIAL WORK

International Symposium on Emerging Trends in Social Science Research

An International Symposium on Emerging Trends in Social Science Research was organized by the Department of Social Work and Women's Studies, Alagappa University, Karaikudi, on 1st September 2016. The main objective of this symposium was to explore the basic dimensions of the social research and the concomitant need for researchers to rethink about the assumptions that underlie contemporary issues and trends in social science research.

Speaking at the symposium, Prof. S. Subbiah, Vice-chancellor, Alagappa University, Karaikudi, said that social science research explores the relationship between individuals and society. It mainly focuses on society ; and newspapers today act as the best and dominant sources for designing the research topics of contemporary social relevance. And at the same time the old issues with new twist also provides space for research. And in this context, he added that society is a lab for social science researcher which was a very vast domain but the science researcher's work is confined to the restricted space of their laboratories. "Any development is, in fact, intrinsically related to human values and all researches should pertain to the contribution to society". He further said that the researchers should have distinct ideas about the qualitative and quantitative aspects of research while selecting their research problems. "Unless the researcher has a thorough knowledge on both qualitative and quantitative aspects of social research, his work will not fulfil the expectations of the society", he stressed.

Prof. Premalatha Karuppiah of the School of the Social Sciences, University Sains Malaysia, in her key-note address, referred to the three major trends in social science research such as issues in social science research, methodological aspects of social science research and the type of data and the traditional boundaries of social science research. Violence against women, poverty, marginalization etc. are the old issues demanding new perspectives owing to the current technological development. She also spoke about the need for evolving indigenous theories in Asian situation relegating the Western theories to the background, which are not very pragmatic to the conditions prevailing in Asian countries.

Prof. K. Manimekalai, Dean, Faculty of Arts, Alagappa University, delivered a special address on the occasion. She insisted on the selection of topics relating to emerging trends and burning issues that affected the individuals in a complex society. While preparing research proposals, the scholars should think of emerging issues affecting the society that would fetch funds from the funding agencies. Social science research alone will bring peace to humanity, she added.

In the technical sessions that followed, Prof. A. Narayanamoorthy, Syndicate Member, Alagappa University, Dr. M. Kannan, Former Principal, Madurai Institute of Social Sciences, Prof. Nalini, Prof. & Head, Dept. of Social Science, Pondicherry University, delivered lectures on various topics related to intensive social science research.

Two-Day National Conference on Information for All: Changing Role of Public Libraries in Digital India Initiatives

A Two-day National Conference on the "Information for All: Changing Role of Public Libraries in Digital India Initiatives" was conducted by the Department of Library and Information Science on 2nd & 3rd September, 2016 at Alagappa University, Karaikudi, in association with Raja

Rammohun Roy Library Foundation, Ministry of Culture, Government of India. More than three hundred library professionals from across the nation participated and presented papers in the seminar. They deliberated on the crucial issues pertaining to the theme of the seminar. While welcoming the scholars, the Organising Secretary of the Conference Dr. S. Thanuskodi, Professor & Head, Department of Library and Information Science, Alagappa University, made a warm reference to the collaborators of the conference for their financial support for conducting this kind of national conference on a crucial topic of current interest.

Presiding over the function, Prof. S.Subbiah, Vice-Chancellor, Alagappa University, said that libraries have all along been remained as dynamic institutions and they have grown along with human civilization .The key to harnessing India's demographic dividend is education . He referred to the crucial role libraries play in fostering knowledge. He said that great leaders like C.N. Annadurai, Ambedkar and A.P.J.Abdul Kalam, spent their golden time in libraries that shaped their great personalities. He said that public libraries not only act as information resource centres but also they act as informal educational centres. They are aptly called people's universities and social institutions. The current Digital India Programme is a boon to every citizen and it focuses on digital infrastructure as a utility to every citizen. He added that the ultimate aim of this umbrella initiative, as envisaged by the Prime Minister, is to provide Digital Empowerment to the citizens of this country. There are many advantages of Digital India as it will create employment; increase the literacy rate; improve the economy; pave the way for transparency in government functioning thus checking corruption; and provide quick delivery of judgment in the judicial sector. At the same time he said the country needs a foolproof and dynamic system where such things can be established.

Dr. Arun Kumar Chakraborty, Director General, Raja Rammohun Roy Library Foundation, Kolkata and Additional Mission Director, NML, Ministry of Culture, Government of India, in his inaugural address, stated that Raja Rammohun Roy Library Foundation is supporting 34,000 public libraries in India. The motto of this foundation is ensuring the development of public libraries in India. Unlike private libraries, public libraries will be open to all at all times; and there will be no discrimination and no restriction. Public libraries are of the people, by the people and for the people. He added that the President of India has inaugurated the National Mission on Libraries which is entrusted with the task of building up 76 model libraries across the nation and the government has allocated Rs.40 crores for this purpose. The Government has put forth four major schemes such as building model libraries, conducting capacity building programmes for librarians, making surveys on the functions of libraries and the creation of national virtual libraries. Under this scheme 60000 library professionals will be trained. 6.5 lakhs of books will be digitalized under the National Virtual Library Scheme which would surpass the Google's services. He added that the acronym LAMP is becoming popular today that refers to libraries, archives, museums and preservation.

In his keynote address Dr. K.P. Vijayakumar, Former HoD, DLIS and Hon. Director, Center for Information Literacy Studies, University of Kerala, Thiruvananthapuram, said that the UNESCO has lauded the cardinal role of public libraries. In all the three revisions, the UNESCO has emphasised the contributions of libraries in social empowerment. While speaking about the quintessence of public libraries in the digital era he exhorted the library professionals manning the public libraries to go in for "de-skilling and re-skilling" in the current fast changing technological world. The IT sector should be utilized for innovation and creativity which the Prime Minister often reinforces in his speeches. Referring to the changing face of libraries, he said the youngsters preferred digital materials in the place of print sources in the mobile phone era. 9000 journals are available in open access directory but unfortunately the research scholars and students are unaware of such provisions. He added that reaching the unreached through the digitalized library would be relevant in the present situation. The number of e'learners will surpass learners in formal system of education at the global level. Some of the Career Guidance Cells attached to some public libraries have become popular among youngsters. Awareness should be created among the people by the librarians about the available resources in public libraries. He made a mention of the M.S.Swaminathan Research Foundation's innovative work of providing information to the fishermen community. He noted that the Indian Public Library Movement is gaining momentum and its objective is to create digitally literate people. He said the libraries can avail the required funds from corporates under the social responsibility scheme.

International Literacy Day

International Literacy Day was celebrated by the Department of Library and Information Science, Alagappa University, Karaikudi, on 8th September, 2016.

Dr. V. Balachandran, Registrar i/c., Alagappa University, in his presidential address, said that both the State and Central Governments are making sincere efforts to increase literacy rates among the youth, who form a major chunk of the country's population, by granting enormous scholarships and making reservations for the socially and economically disadvantaged sections of the society. The students should avail them for their own development and also for contributing to the nation's growth. Quoting a popular Tamil saying that a king is recognized only in his own country, but a scholar is recognized by people all over the world, he referred to the honour and respect enjoyed by a scholar. In today's knowledge economy, he stressed the importance of making reading a daily habit in order to know the happenings around the world. To become a successful student, one has to listen first, then ask questions to ascertain the correctness of his understanding and then write without errors. The distinguished speaker went on to quote a few findings from the Census Report of India - 2011, illiteracy was the highest among the Muslim population. He also quoted that Bihar and Telengana had the lowest literacy rates in India at 63.82% and 66.5% respectively. Adding to the fact that a country's development is always evaluated by its literacy rate, he said that in spite of having 37% of the global population, India did not exhibit the required amount of literacy rate. Further, he said that in spite of illiteracy issues, Tamil Nadu contributed to almost 44.8% of the Gross Enrolment Ratio (GER) of the nation, while GER for India is 23.6%.

Dr.A.Ganesan, Director, Knowledge Resource Centre, PRIST University, Thanjavur, delivered the special address. He said “According to higher education statistics, only 2% of the people are getting higher education in India. Also, according to World Bank reports, there is a parallelism between the higher education of a country’s population and its economic development”. He appealed to the youth of the nation to take upon themselves the task of spreading the message of literacy for the total development of our country, both social and economic.

Prof. K. Gurunathan, Member of the Syndicate, offered his felicitations. Dr. S.Thanuskodi, Professor and Head, welcomed the gathering and Dr. R. Jeyshankar, Assistant Professor, proposed a vote of thanks.

DEPARTMENT OF ANIMAL HEALTH AND MANAGEMENT

International Workshop on “Molecular Physiology, Therapeutics and Experimental Medicine”

An International Workshop on “Molecular Physiology, Therapeutics and Experimental Medicine” was organized by the Department of Animal Health and Management and Department of Bioinformatics on 6.9.2016 at the Conference

Hall of the Science Campus, Alagappa University, Karaikudi.

The workshop was organized taking into consideration the several challenges being encountered in the field of therapeutics and medicine, which has also emerged as a reliable tool for providing breakthrough in the field of medicine for developing efficient drug-delivery systems through nano particles. Further, this workshop provided a new platform for scientists and researchers to come together and share the current knowledge in the field of medicine.

Prof. S. Subbiah, Vice-Chancellor, Alagappa University, in his presidential address, said that there is an urgent need for molecular medicine based research for the prevention of contagious and chronic diseases such as dengue, viral fever, etc. Most of the diseases such as diabetes are due to metabolic disorder and lack of secretion of the anti-diabetic hormone insulin. In this scenario, scientists are investigating the molecular genetics to unveil the molecules responsible for the outbreak of diseases. He added that the recent advances in molecular and cell biology are revolutionizing cancer research and he hoped the current researches in this field would provide solutions to the challenges of infectious diseases.

Prof. P. Ramasamy, Formerly Vice-Chancellor of Alagappa University, in his inaugural address, said that research so far carried out is only based on general molecular mechanism related to specific diseases; and he requested the budding scholars to concentrate more specifically on the signal transduction mechanism for a better understanding of a particular disease. He added that there are 37.2 trillion cells in various parts of the body. In galaxy, there are 200 billion cells, but in our body there are 800 billion cells. 50 billion fat cells are found in an average body and heart muscle contains 2 billion cells. The number of atoms in each of these cells is still on an average 5 times larger than the total number of cells in the body. Eventually alteration in cellular activity changes the programme of genes expressed within the responding cells. He added that the presence of eminent scientists from abroad will enthuse the participants to acquire knowledge about the recent developments in molecular genetics research.

Prof. P. Manisankar, Dean, Faculty of Science of Alagappa University, in his keynote address, pointed out the importance of therapeutics and experimental medicine in cancer research. International Chief Guests, Dr. Alexei Verkhatsky, University of Manchester, U.K., Dr. Indhu S. Ambudkar, National Institute of Health, USA, Dr. ShmuelMuallem, National Institute of Health, USA and Dr. Govindan Dayanithi, Institute of Experimental Medicine, Czech Republic, offered felicitations

He added that “mother is the first teacher and the teacher is a second mother” and in this context, the teachers should realize their duties and responsibilities. As students learn many things from teachers, they must be role models. Further, he added that the teaching is the noblest of all professions in the world. In other professions, one may earn money, but in teaching the teachers make others happy and in turn derive happiness.

Referring to the ancient seat of higher learning the Nalanda University, he stated how the erudition and devotion of Scholar-Teachers beckoned students from different parts of the world. A mastery over the subject and updating of knowledge in the subject are very crucial to become effective teachers. That is a way to produce good and useful citizens. The objective of education is not only earning money but serving the society so as to contribute to the nation-building.

He also said that even before the starting of the Alagappa University, the College of Education and Physical Education were started by the visionary Founder Dr. Alagappa Chettiar. Both these institutions have produced Vice-Chancellors. He stated that the students who have joined here are really fortunate and exhorted them to imbibe the spirit of achieving something great in their career. Dr. C.N. Annadurai, Dr. Ambedkar, Dr. APJ. Abdul Kalam, Dr. S. Radhakrishnan were avid readers and they had used libraries properly to become great leaders of the nation. He advised the students to make use of the excellent library facilities available at the University and bring laurels to the institution by way of remarkable achievements.

Prof. V. Balachandran, Registrar i/c., Alagappa University, in his welcome address, briefly traced the contributions made by Dr. Alagappa Chettiar to the cause of higher education in this educationally backward region. Alagappa University is always conscious of imparting quality in all its performances, he added. He cited the University's motto "Excellence in Action" and that excellence should be attained through perseverance and hard work by the students. He appealed to the students to follow the noble virtues such as simplicity, honesty and generosity practised by the Founder of this great institution.

A two-day National Seminar on “Consumer Protection and Empowerment in India in the Wake of Technology Domination” was organized by the Department of Corporate Secretaryship of Alagappa University in collaboration with Centre for Consumer Studies IIPA, New Delhi, on 26.8.2016.

Prof. S. Subbiah, Vice-Chancellor, Alagappa University, in his presidential address, said that the consumer is the king today, but unfortunately he is not aware of the various nuances of the Consumer Protection Act; and he added that the manufacturer or service- provider is bound to provide quality goods / services at an affordable price to attract the consumers in this highly competitive market economy. The Alagappa University is offering quality infrastructural and instructional facilities to the student-community (its consumers) with a variety of academic programmes. The University is making available all facilities to attract foreign students. An institution can survive long only when it continues to satisfy the needs of the consumers by providing quality services, he stressed.

Thiru A. Navanithakrishnan, M.P., Rajya Sabha, in his inaugural address, exhorted the students to make full use of the internet facility with the help of laptops, supplied by the Government of Tamil Nadu, as the power supply today is uninterrupted. He added that almost all villagers today enjoy the facilities available in urban areas and the people can easily be educated about their rights and duties. The technology today should be optimally utilized by all and the “net neutrality” should ensure unrestricted supply of information to the public. At the same time with technological advancements, markets have become more sophisticated and complicated. New issues, problems and challenges relating to quality, availability and safety of goods and services are posed before the consumers. Hence, he said there is an imperative need to safeguard the interests of consumers from unscrupulous and exploitative practices. Consumer Protection Legislation is intended to provide justice that is simple, speedy and inexpensive. And indeed these fora play a vital role in redressing the grievances of the consumers.

Prof. Pushpavanam, a Consumer Right Activist from Trichy, in his keynote address, elaborated on the various rights of consumers citing innumerable practical cases that were brought to consumers' fora in the US and India. He observed that the technology domination is good when it helps the consumers with easy and faster services. The technology has pervaded all the areas to make the services quality-oriented. He added that Right to Information Act is a boon and explained its various contents.

Prof. Suresh Misra, Chair Professor and Coordinator, Centre for Consumer Studies – IIPA, New Delhi, in his Special Address, said that “consumer justice is a part of social and economic justice enshrined in the Constitution of India”. According to Swamiji nothing could be equivalent to human potential; and when it is used properly, it will bring welfare to individuals as well as the nation.

The aim of education should be to create individuals who could stand on their own legs and lead an independent life. He appealed to the students to tread in the path shown by Swami Vivekananda for a fruitful and glorious life. Swamiji's life itself is an example to emulate, as he could well integrate a clear goal, planning and action in his life. He added that Vivekananda's clarion call to the youth “to arise, awake and stop not till the goal is reached” should reverberate in the minds of the youth. According to Vivekananda, youth should use their inherent potential skills and energy for uplifting the society so as to elevate themselves.

Prof. V. Balachandran, Registrar i/c., Alagappa University, in his address, lauded Swami Vivekananda as a personality who has shown the righteous way of life to all youngsters and he said that there are 55 crore youth population in India and the country's development lies in their hands for which the teachers should impart value-based education to make the country a vibrant one.

Thiru R. Senthilkumar, Co-ordinator, Vivekananda Kendra, Kanyakumari, in his keynote address, made a reference to Swamiji's 150th year Birth Anniversary celebrated throughout the world. He added that it showed the relevance and value of his messages for the welfare of humanity. Under the directions of the Government of Tamil Nadu, the Centres were established in 9 State Universities and only in three Universities, the Centres function effectively and he lauded that Alagappa University is one among them. The remarkable achievement of Swami Vivekananda was his endeavour to introduce the grandeur and opulence of Indian culture and tradition to the Western World through his Chicago Address. He exhorted the students to respect parents, teachers and elders, as advised by Swamiji.

To mark the programme, tree saplings were planted by the distinguished guests. 300 participants representing various faculties attended the programme.

Mrs. S. Chellam, Co-ordinator, Swami Vivekananda Centre for Higher Research and Education, Alagappa University, welcomed the gathering. Dr. Vasimalai Raja, Deputy Co-ordinator of the Centre, proposed a vote of thanks.

Vivekananda, he added, brought India to the lime light of the world’s forum cherishing Universal Brotherhood. He remarked that difference between religions is mainly in “externals” and every religion endeavours to evolve a God out of the material man and the same god is the inspirer of all of them. All these religions preached the doctrine of love, brotherhood and humanitarian service only.

Swamy Chandrasekarananda of Ramakrishna Tapovanam, Thiruppurayathurai, delivered the keynote address and praised Swami Vivekananda as a visionary, who inspired the whole world through his life and speeches, instilled brotherhood, self-confidence, courage, will-power and patriotism among youth.
