THEME OF THE CONFERENCE

Open Educational Resources (OER) are rapidly gaining impetus in education systems worldwide. While the usage of OER serves as an effective strategy to address the access and cost related issues of education in general and higher education in particular, there are still many gaps within the academic communities in the adoption of OER. The issues such as 'why' and 'how' aspects of OER can make shift in teaching and learning as divergent to any other learning resources. There is a need to be a focused on the innovative open educational practices on the OER based learning. While promotion of OER is essential, building the capacity in the integration of OER is also equally important. Beside efficient integration of OER supported by ICT, the effective use of OER in teaching and learning can only be enhanced through the adoption of well organised course design process. Since the Educators have the prime responsibilities in finding and integrating appropriate OER in the teaching - learning process, an endeavour has been taken to address such issues through the present conference.
